A Welcome from the Chair

It is lovely to see you here this evening; thank you for joining us for this concert. This is the Choir's last concert of the season though we have one more event, which is our weekend tour to Stoke Gabriel in July.

It has been a busy couple of months, with a successful concert at St John's Wood, London where we joined the St John's Wood Church Choir to sing Michael's recent composition The Way Through the Woods.

Please join us after this concert for some refreshments and we hope to see you next season.

Notes

This evening we examine the subject of ‘music and light’ in a series of short pieces. Music and light can each produce an infinite variety of shades of colour, and many composers create a sense of heavenly light when setting the text In Paradisum to a Requiem Mass; notable examples of this are from Requiem settings by Fauré, Howells, and Duruflé.

Choral composers are especially good at creating a wide variety of textures to suggest light, and this evening’s programme explores different composers’ use of light and shade over the centuries.

We begin with Thomas Tallis' O Nata Lux ('O Light of Light'). This is a luminous piece reflecting Tallis' mastery of polyphonic choral writing. It was written to celebrate the feast of the transfiguration, a moment in the gospels when Jesus is seen bathed in light.

We then have J.S. Bach's O Jesu Christ, meins Lebens Licht ('O Jesus Christ, my life's true light'). This is an unusual piece for Bach, as it does not belong to a larger work and stands alone as a motet. The serene chorale melody wafts above the harmony, transporting the listener upwards to heaven.

Elgar's Light of the World is an anthem taken from the much larger oratorio of the same name, inspired by William Holman Hunt's famous painting. It reflects Elgar's deep religious convictions, exploring spiritual awakening and redemption.

Rheinberger's Abendlied is our first piece to explore the subject of 'light at evening'. The text is from Luke's Gospel, where the downcast disciples meet the risen Christ on the road to Emmaus and invite him to "Stay with us for it is almost evening and the day is nearly over".

H. Balfour Gardiner's Evening Hymn, Te lucis ante terminum ('Thee, Lord before the close of day'), takes its text from the evening service of compline. The middle section prays for protection during the night and the final 'amens' describe the setting Sun.

Brahm's Geistliches Lied ('Sacred Song') reminds us not to fear, to be calm, and to try to not worry about tomorrow. Although it doesn't contain any text about light, as in Balfour Gardiner's Te Lucis the final amen creates the serenity and calm of a beautiful sunset.

We then have Holst's setting of the Nunc Dimittis. The Nunc Dimittis, or 'Song of Simeon', is the moment when the elderly Simeon takes the infant Christ in his hands and declares that he can now die as he has seen the Salvation and Light of the world.

Our main work is Bob Chilcott's Canticles of Light. It was written in three movements, of which two are performed this evening: Te Lucis ante terminum ('Before the ending of the day') and O Nata Lux ('O Light of light'). The first movement is dark in character, entreating God for protection through the night. The last movement lightens to meet the dawn of a new day, expressing the belief that, with God's help, the light of day will encourage new strength and hope.

We finish our programme with Eric Whitacre's Lux Aurumque: light, warm and heavy as pure gold.

Michael Cayton
